Message from the CEO

Dear neighbors,

It's my pleasure to introduce you to the fall issue of Monitor. Since I joined EvergreenHealth as CEO this summer, I've enjoyed getting to know this wonderful community, taking in the majestic scenery of the Pacific Northwest, and connecting with our region's people, patients, employees and families. What a beautiful place to call home.

Like any newcomer, I've spent much time exploring the area, and have likely spent an equal amount of time "rerouting" after a wrong turn or two. It all comes with the territory of learning the ins and outs of a new environment.

My experience navigating the Northwest offers a fitting parallel to this fall issue's theme of health care navigation.

All too often we hear the stories of our friends and loved ones feeling lost in the increasingly complex landscape of the health care industry. Over my 25-year career in the medical field, first as a physician and hospitalist, and then as a health care administrator, much of my work has been focused on improving the patient experience. By joining patients and families as their partner in navigating the unfamiliar, we can help achieve the best outcomes for all.

That is part of what makes EvergreenHealth so special—our purpose is grounded in working together toward this very goal, ensuring that we continue our legacy as your trusted partner in health now, and for generations well into the future.

For this issue, we're pleased to bring you a practical guide to support you in navigating your health care. I hope it offers insight into the many ways we strive to center our care and service on our expanding community, amid the ever-evolving landscape of health care delivery.

I look forward to continuing to discover all this community has to offer, and I deeply appreciate your partnership along the way.

Sincerely,

Amy Beiter, MD

"As experienced providers, our role is to enhance our patients' quality of life by guiding you as you navigate health care. 1 Kate is a 48-year-old teacher who normally has a strong immune system, but feels run down and can't shake a persistent cough.
2 Nadia is a 55-year-old woman who wakes up feeling lightheaded. Later, her neck and shoulder stiffen, and by the afternoon a bout of nausea causes her to break into a cold sweat. Nadia recalls from an article she read that these may be symptoms of a stroke.
3 Aaron, an active 34-year-old, is playing in his Tuesday night soccer league when he rolls his ankle and hears a popping sound. Even after icing it, his ankle continues to swell and bruise.
4 Angie and Dane's infant is unusually fussy while feeding and her diaper changes seem different, too. They wonder if her symptoms are related and if something might be wrong.
5 Doug is a 66-year-old avid golfer who, with his specialist, has decided to schedule an ultrasound-guided injection to treat his shoulder pain. Doug had planned to participate in a golf tournament next month, but isn't sure how soon after the injection he'll be ready to play.

Visualizing Hope: An Oncologist's Journey Through His Own Cancer Care

With support from his family, friends and care team, Dr. Eric Taylor conquered lung cancer by relying on expert care and navigation and the power of 'present' thinking.

Situated within EvergreenHealth radiation oncologist Dr. Eric Taylor's office is a figurine of Ganesha, a Hindu symbol for wisdom, good luck, and eliminating barriers. It often serves as gentle encouragement for the thousands of patients Dr. Taylor has served throughout his 40-year career in cancer medicine.

He, too, draws inspiration from its presence, but never more significantly than earlier this year as he faced his own cancer diagnosis.

This spring when Dr. Taylor noticed a persistent cough and flu symptoms, his primary care provider recommended a chest X-ray, to rule out anything significant. Instead it revealed a cause for concern – his symptoms were actually caused by a sizeable cancerous mass in the upper right lung.

"I was absolutely terrified," he described. Never a smoker, lung cancer was the last thing the 66-year-old expected to face. Despite his decades of experience leading efforts to advance his field, "You just can't help but think that life is over," he recalled.

Like many newly diagnosed patients, Dr. Taylor and his family grappled with the darkness of the unknown as they faced an endless list of questions: How did this happen? How much time do I have? Is it terminal?

As he waded through the uncertainties, an early safe harbor emerged in the form of a conversation with Dr. Taylor's friend and colleague Dr. Hope Wechkin, medical director of EvergreenHealth Hospice & Palliative Care.

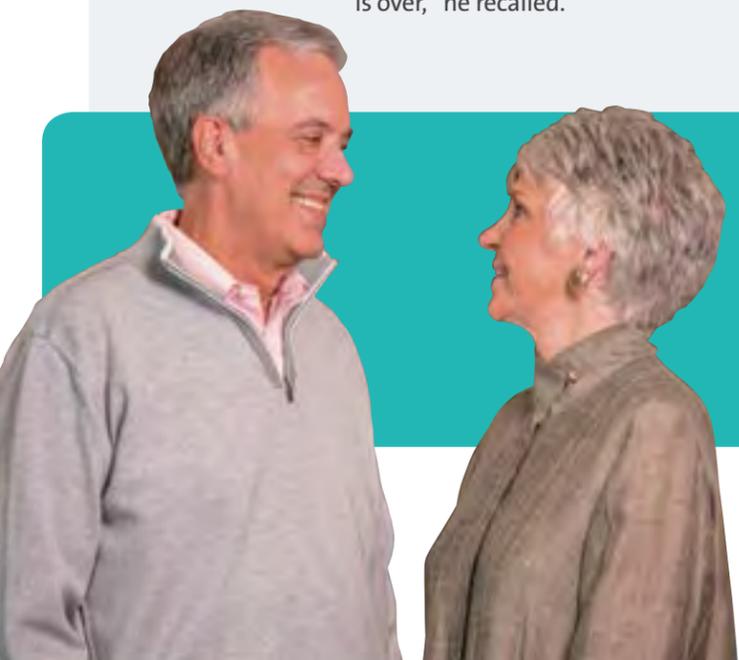

The two talked about their experience caring for patients facing cancer, while also navigating the more personal concept of "present" thinking—the idea that living in the moment, being fully present and accepting all outcomes can lead to healing.

It was that counsel and his own intense introspection, along with expert guidance from his care team, which helped Dr. Taylor emotionally prepare for the journey ahead.

"I accepted that, 'Yes, I didn't choose this. Life happens and I'm facing stage three lung cancer,'" he explained. "Once the plan was established, I thought, 'I'm going to win this,

"I wanted to go to EvergreenHealth because I believe the people in our department, and the access Halvorson Cancer Center provides to Seattle Cancer Care Alliance's internationally recognized experts, are truly exceptional. I knew that I would be treated as well at EvergreenHealth as any place, anywhere."

Eric Taylor, MD, EvergreenHealth radiation oncologist and Halvorson Cancer Center patient, with wife Sheena Aebig

Michael Bundesmann, MD, EvergreenHealth pulmonologist

"Fighting disease itself is so taxing that even for an expert like Dr. Taylor, managing the treatment process is incredibly overwhelming. Our role is to offer an umbrella of support for the range of services across many departments, creating a clear pathway for patients to follow along their care."

given all the interventions that are available to us.' The point where you can internalize and really believe that, something changes."

Tests had found microscopic cancer cells in one lymph node beyond the tumor, which confirmed he would need radiation and chemotherapy before scheduling surgery to remove the mass.

Dr. Taylor spent six weeks undergoing daily radiation therapy treatments, coupled with chemotherapy. During each session, he visualized the therapies attacking his cancer cells and melting the tumor away, viewing each treatment as an opportunity to be present and eliminate barriers to achieving a cure.

It worked. The tumor had nearly disappeared and he was ready for surgery. Then, even better news came following the operation: the cancer was gone.

"It was the moment I felt I had my life back," he described.

And his journey continues. Today, Dr. Taylor is cancer free and takes a daily medication recently approved as a targeted therapy for the specific gene mutation of his cancer to reduce the risk of recurrence. As he returned to his role treating patients this fall, he continues to adjust to a new post-cancer perspective, and he is ever mindful of the power of present thinking.

"Clinically, it's as successful of an outcome as one could hope for," he said. "Emotionally, I'm working on reconciling my new normal, and I'm grateful for the deeper level of connection and empathy I now get to share with my patients."

Rosanna Yeung, MD, EvergreenHealth radiation oncologist

"We don't often have the opportunity to care for our colleagues, so treating Dr. Taylor, who has been a great mentor to me, was a privilege and a unique situation. His experience, however, was not unique as it highlights how we approach every individual in our care. Each provider plays an indispensable role in coming together to help our patients along their journey."

Making a Statement

From water and electricity, to automotive and cell phone bills—navigating statements can be confusing, especially when it comes to health care. EvergreenHealth is working to simplify medical billing to improve patients' experience.

After you receive medical care, dealing with the complexities of health care bills can be confusing and overwhelming. We get it.

That's why, as part of our commitment to meeting the needs of our growing community, the Patient Financial Services team at EvergreenHealth is developing solutions that simplify medical billing. From an updated statement layout to a new online payment platform that is designed with the user-experience in mind, our goal is to help patients focus more on living well and less on health care costs.

Let's break down the typical billing statement for an outpatient procedure at the hospital.

Hospital Billing: Your statement for in-hospital stays and outpatient procedures, such as lab work or diagnostic imaging. Visits to primary and specialty care are considered Professional Billing.

Important Messages: EvergreenHealth's hospital services are often just one part of a patient's overall experience. Some independent providers, who may include radiologists, surgeons or physical therapists, also have their own charges and their own negotiated prices with health insurance companies.

Account Number: This is the unique number associated with each separate hospital visit or procedure, which links to your patient billing record. Our system will soon link all account numbers from each visit so any outstanding balances and payment history are reflected within one comprehensive patient record.

Total Charges: The total cost of your services, before insurance coverage is applied.

Total Payments: Payments made by your insurance company toward your total charges.

Total Adjustments: The amount EvergreenHealth deducts as part of our agreement with your health insurance provider.

Amount Due Upon Receipt: Amount you owe out-of-pocket after insurance payments and provider adjustments have been applied.

We welcome your questions. If you have questions about your hospital bill, call 1.877.216.5245. For questions about your bill for primary or specialty care, call 1.877.216.0753.

Health Care Tools at Your Fingertips

At EvergreenHealth, our commitment to being your best partner in health means embracing technology that works for you, to help you become more proactive about your health, and to make navigating your health care experience straightforward, transparent and seamless.

Tools to Manage Your Payments

After receiving a billing statement in the mail, you can pay using EvergreenHealth's online payment portal. The platform serves as a single point of contact for both hospital and professional billing statements. Simply log-in with your billing statement account number to:

- Access current statements for professional and hospital services
- View remaining balances and set up payment plans
- Pay your hospital and professional bills

Pay your bill online by visiting <https://evergreen.mrvbillpay.com>.

Personalized Cost Estimates for Your Care

Knowing how much a service or procedure will cost is an important part of navigating your care. To help patients make informed health care decisions, EvergreenHealth offers personalized cost estimates to determine the approximate amount your services will cost, what your insurance is expected to pay and how much you might owe after insurance.

To get started, it's helpful to know the CPT—or current procedural code—of your procedure. Your provider can share this, or our staff may be able to help, as well.

Submit an estimate request online at www.evergreenhealth.com/health-care-cost or call our Patient Financial Services team directly at 425.899.3632.

From Rare to Recovery

When an abnormal tumor threatened a family’s future, they turned to EvergreenHealth’s comprehensive neurosurgical program to beat the odds.

It was a typical weekend trip to the grocery store for Blake and Crystal Albertsen and their three young sons. But when the 37-year-old father suddenly lost feeling throughout the left side of his body, he knew something was seriously wrong.

“My first thought was that I was having a stroke or a heart attack,” Albertsen explained. Given that he had never experienced anything like this before, the family dropped everything and headed to the ER to have him checked out right away.

An MRI at EvergreenHealth’s Redmond emergency department revealed a slow-growing schwannoma, an extremely rare tumor, resting near the brain stem and pushing on Albertsen’s spinal cord. Both the size and position of the tumor posed a serious threat to Albertsen’s long-term quality of life—left untreated the tumor would undoubtedly lead to complete paralysis on both sides of his body, robbing him of the ability to walk or talk, let alone care for his family.

The Right Team for the Best Outcome

Within a week, the Albertsens met with EvergreenHealth neurosurgeons Dr. Peter Nora and Dr. Shiviendra Jeyamohan, and orthopedic spine surgeon Dr. Mark Freeborn. Together, they reviewed their plan and explained how they would work together to navigate this complex surgery to enter Albertsen’s spine and carefully remove the tumor.

Shiviendra Jeyamohan, MD, EvergreenHealth Spine & Neurosurgical Care surgeon

“Blake’s condition was very rare, but our team performed a successful surgery that gave this young family the best outcome we could hope for. Not only did we remove the tumor, but his progress toward a full recovery has been fantastic.”

“That is the beauty of our comprehensive program—we can take on the most advanced cases and guide patients through a highly coordinated experience, from the initial diagnosis through treatment, recovery and rehabilitation,” Dr. Jeyamohan said.

Peter Nora, MD, EvergreenHealth Spine & Neurosurgical Care surgeon

“For a complex case like Blake’s, we assemble a multidisciplinary team of experts who collaborate throughout the entire procedure. It’s important to us for patients to know that they are receiving the benefit of many different specialists working together, who are all completely focused on our shared goal of achieving the most successful results.”

“Hearing the diagnosis was a total shock. But the entire team’s compassion and assurance that I was going to get the highest quality care from the best doctors made me feel like we were in the right place.”

When There's No Place Like Home

EvergreenHealth Home Care is the state's largest home health provider under one roof.

After an injury or illness, patients often make the most successful recoveries within the comfort of their homes. In order to meet the wide range of health needs in our growing community, EvergreenHealth provides the region's most comprehensive home health care services—but not everyone knows how to access home care and the scope of services our practitioners offer. Here's what you need to know to navigate home health care.

Home health is designed to help patients with many different health needs.

Whether you're recovering from surgery or managing a chronic illness, home health care services are available to anyone who has difficulty leaving home. That can simply mean that traveling to a doctor's appointment is too exhausting, you have limited physical mobility, or you experience other complications.

Home health is typically short-term.

Home health care is intended to be short-term rehabilitative care to help patients recover in a safe and familiar setting. Home health care providers are nurses, physical therapists, occupational therapists, speech therapists, social workers and home health aides. The team collaborates to help you heal.

Home health services are billed similarly to a doctor's office visit.

When your doctor refers you for home health services, the visit is generally covered by Medicare or insurance benefits. EvergreenHealth's Home Health Services team helps you understand your benefits and how to apply them.

You don't need to clean your house before every visit.

Put down that vacuum! Home health providers are accustomed to being in people's homes and are trained to help you modify your space to ensure your environment is safe and easy to navigate.

Best Care from the Most Thoughtful People

When complications from Parkinson's disease required Lola Vandelac to use a wheelchair, her doctor prescribed home care from nurses to treat her immediate symptoms. She also recommended in-home physical therapy to help Lola regain strength, and occupational therapy to manage household tasks while in a wheelchair.

Lola Vandelac, EvergreenHealth Home Health Care patient

"They are like angels coming to visit. Because I live on my own, the assistance they provide gives me the skills and confidence I need to live independently. I've been given the best care from the most thoughtful and kind people."

Getting Started

- ✓ If you need skilled care from a nurse or therapist, you're likely eligible for home health care.
- ✓ Ask your doctor if home health services are appropriate. Even if your provider hasn't prescribed it as part of your recovery, it's always OK to ask.
- ✓ A simple call from your provider can initiate home care services.

Learn more about EvergreenHealth Home Health Care Services by calling 425.899.3300 or by visiting www.evergreenhealth.com/home-health-care.

EvergreenHealth Experts Guide Discussions for Navigating End-of-Life Care

Advance directives help families prepare for the unexpected.

In the event of an injury or illness that left you unable to communicate for yourself, would your loved ones know your wishes for your care? For many, thinking about end-of-life care can be unsettling, and talking about it is an even bigger hurdle.

EvergreenHealth Palliative Care manager Cynthia Tomik is determined to help families embrace these conversations. She's part of a team offering practical resources and support to capture your wishes through an advance directive.

Monitor sat down with Cynthia to learn how EvergreenHealth is expanding its services to help patients and families in their greatest time of need.

What are advance directives?

Cynthia: At the highest level, it's a legal document that helps guide your loved ones and health care providers in making medical decisions on your behalf. Also known as a "living will," it shares your intentions for how you'd like to receive end-of-life-care, in case you're unable to communicate your wishes.

Who should create an advance directive, and how does the process work?

Cynthia: Taking time to ponder your values and what makes life worth living is worthwhile for people of all ages. Our facilitated process starts with a conversation about life, exploring your beliefs and what gives you joy—and we use those as building blocks for navigating your end-of-life care.

Cynthia Tomik, EvergreenHealth Palliative Care manager

Who should be involved in creating your advance care directive?

Cynthia: In addition to creating a guiding document, advance care planning considers who you would appoint as your health care agent, or power of attorney. Whether it's your spouse, sibling or friend, it's important to include your agent so they can reflect back on your planning discussions when making decisions on your behalf.

How can I get started?

Cynthia: We welcome families and individuals to join us at upcoming free, two-hour workshops for advance care planning on our Kirkland campus. Please call Healthline at 425.899.3000 to register or learn more at www.evergreenhealth.com/advance-directives.

Navigating the Benefits of a Clinically Integrated Network

Understanding its Structure

A how-to guide for getting the most from your health care benefits and network.

When navigating health care benefits and insurance networks, an advanced degree can feel necessary just to understand the basics. ACO, CIN, ACA – what do these network structures mean, and how do they benefit you?

With the launch of a new clinically integrated network (CIN), Eastside Health Network (EHN), formed by providers from EvergreenHealth, Overlake Medical Center and Clinics, and independent practices, nearly 50,000 community members have access to providers who are working together to offer a more coordinated experience for better outcomes, and increased value for patients' health care dollars.

With open enrollment upon us, here are a few tips to harness the benefits of a clinically integrated network and navigate one like a pro.

Technical Terms to Know

Clinically Integrated Network (CIN)

CINs align independent providers with a health system's employed providers through a shared infrastructure that promotes provider collaboration. CINs improve patient outcomes and reduce costs because they incentivize providers to work together more effectively.

In-Network

Patients will typically pay the lowest out-of-pocket costs when they receive services from "in-network providers" who are part of their clinically integrated network, compared to providers who are out-of-network.

David LaMarche, Chief Administrative Officer, Eastside Health Network

"Clinically integrated networks emphasize accessibility and value above all else. At Eastside Health Network, we believe in partnering with patients to offer access to an expert group of providers who can serve their specific health needs at the best value. By connecting our community with our network of providers, EHN helps patients to approach their health holistically, which leads to better outcomes."

Find an In-Network Provider

When your employer chooses an Eastside Health Network plan, you have access to nearly 1,400 in-network Eastside providers from EvergreenHealth, Overlake Medical Center and Clinics, and independent practices.

You can find an EHN provider, or check to see if your current provider is a member by:

- Using our online provider search tool at www.eastsidehealthnetwork.com.
- Calling the EvergreenHealth 24/7 Nurse Navigator & Healthline at 425.899.3000, where a health resource representative can refer you to an in-network provider.

Save Money and Earn Better Value

By sharing infrastructure costs and working together to eliminate duplicate testing or other unnecessary care, EHN limits added costs and patients experience better overall value.

Get the Best Care, Informed by the Latest Data

A key advantage of the Eastside Health Network is its ability to share data and best practices among providers across the network. The integrated structure fosters provider-to-provider communication, paired with technology support. It also helps establish guidelines and resources for treating common, but serious, chronic diseases like diabetes.

According to Dr. Greg Aeschliman, EHN is developing a clinical-decision support tool to bring the latest data and guidelines to providers' fingertips, beginning with diabetes care.

Greg Aeschliman, MD, EvergreenHealth Primary Care, Woodinville

"We're using a multidisciplinary team approach to benefit our patients. We know that 27 percent of Medicare patients live with diabetes, which, left unchecked, can lead to many serious complications. The tools we're developing enable providers to input patients' risk factors on a desktop computer or mobile app and access on-demand information to help determine the most effective treatment plans."

Partner with an EHN Nurse Care Manager

Dedicated EHN Nurse Care Managers work with at-risk patients as an extension of the primary care team to help you achieve your goals and prevent chronic issues from worsening.

Meet Carloss Vincent and Nurse Care Manager Debi Jefferson, RN

Carloss Vincent, Bellevue Family Medicine patient with Debi Jefferson, RN, EHN Nurse Care Manager

Carloss Vincent was struggling with a trifecta of health complications. He'd suffered two strokes and was dealing with mobility limitations, while maintaining a physically demanding job working nights as a security officer. When his primary care provider suggested he work with an EHN Nurse Care Manager to help him better manage a new diabetes diagnosis and lead a healthier lifestyle, he was reluctant to accept help.

"Before I thought I had to do everything on my own and this concept of care management was foreign to me. But now, Debi helps me keep everything I need to work on front and center, letting me be in control of making my own health care decisions with her guidance and support," said Vincent.

"My message to other patients is to embrace it because it's really advantageous."

Honoring the Wockner Legacy

On Saturday, July 21st, Betty Wockner was surrounded by family and friends as EvergreenHealth Foundation honored her legacy with the naming of the Jack & Betty Wockner Family Reflection Room at the Gene & Irene Wockner Hospice Care Center.

Betty has wholeheartedly embraced the words she lives by, "Donate your dollars and donate your time to help your local community." Her gift to support EvergreenHealth Hospice and Palliative Care programs will continue the Wockners' philanthropic tradition, impacting the patients and families served by EvergreenHealth Hospice Care for years to come. We sincerely thank you, Betty, for your commitment and generosity.

Seasons of Hope Celebrates a Decade of Compassion

Over the last 10 years, the EvergreenHealth Foundation's Seasons of Hope Fundraising Luncheon has accomplished far more than just securing vital financial support for EvergreenHealth Hospice and Palliative Care programs. The event has brought hope, compassion and healing to our community.

In 2017, the support of our generous friends and neighbors enabled nearly 4,000 hospice patients to receive exceptional care through EvergreenHealth Hospice and Palliative Care. We are extremely grateful that you have chosen to support us in our mission to make a positive impact on the lives of our patients and their families.

If you're interested in donating to the event or learning more about how you can contribute, please visit www.SeasonsofHopeLuncheon.org or contact Jennifer Dreyfuss at 425.899.1908 or jedreyfuss@evergreenhealth.com.

EvergreenHealth Foundation Receives BECU People Helping People Award

Through a generous grant provided by BECU, the EvergreenHealth Foundation was able to fund the purchase of new furniture for the Dave Snapp Memorial Conference Room at the Gene & Irene Wockner Hospice Center at EvergreenHealth.

Celia Harper, BSN, RN, CHPN, Manager, EvergreenHealth Hospice Care Center

"This conference room supports daily meetings with 30 to 40 staff in attendance to develop care plans for hospice patients and their families. In addition, this space is also heavily used to train volunteers to provide care and comfort to patients and families either in our inpatient facility or in their homes. Having a furnished space in a central location in which the staff and volunteers can be truly present allows them to work together to enrich the health and well-being of every life we touch."

2018 EvergreenHealth Monroe Foundation Blue Jeans and Boots Gala: Bringing Cancer Care Closer to Home

The EvergreenHealth Monroe Foundation's 2018 Blue Jeans & Boots Gala raised funds to support EvergreenHealth Monroe's Cancer Support Services, including the formation of a new partnership with expert physicians from UW Medicine in collaboration with Seattle Cancer Care Alliance.

Too often, cancer patients make the daily commute to a hospital outside of Monroe to receive their life-saving treatments. The proceeds from the September 8th event will provide EvergreenHealth Monroe with necessary equipment, increase its capacity and help to create a welcoming environment for patients to receive their chemotherapy, close to home. By bringing additional cancer services to the Sky Valley, it allows residents to remain comfortable near their homes, physicians and loved ones rather than traveling to receive exceptional care.

Thank you to all the volunteers, donors and sponsors who made this event a great success. The EvergreenHealth Monroe Foundation appreciates your generosity—you make an enormous difference.
